Does It Better
Why
Lary, more than any other measure, is a rich lexicon for distinguishing language in higher socioeconomic groups. “Child in their theory-of-mind understanding” of oneself and other people.

“Regarding this, Peskin and Astington suggest that...”

“Thus, for a given child, the amount of metacognitive vocabulary they acquire is a measure of their...”

“Several studies, ‘which compared children...’”

“Some writers operate on the fourth level...”

“People who are not as familiar with these sorts of literary devices...”

“Consider this: Lisa Zunshine is a professor of English at the University of Kentucky and the author, most recently, of Getting Inside Popular Culture (John Hopkins University Press, 2012).”

“New Critical Perspectives on Autism

W O R L D S
T H E  C H R O N I C L E  R E V I E W

TEACH LESS FICTION, and only students whose parents encourage them to read on their own will do well.

Because, for years before entering college, students will have been reading less fiction in social studies and less nonfiction in elementary and...